

Understanding Student Finance

Tuition Fees and Maintenance Loans

Undergraduates 2023-2024

Introduction

Student Finance in England was radically overhauled several years ago. Myths, panic, and confusion are still widespread with many not fully understanding how the system works or what support might be available for them.

It is important that you as a potential student are not put off from going to university because you think you cannot afford it. The reality is, money should be the last reason you decide not to go to university. You need to be able to make informed decisions based on facts rather than what you have read online or heard from a friend. This guide aims to give you as much information as possible about the true cost of going to university.

How much will it cost me?

The Government has recently agreed to freeze tuition fees again for 2023-2024 at £9250.00. You also need to factor in any maintenance loan you may decide to take out as well.

There are 2 parts to Student Finance Funding -:

- 1) A non-means tested tuition fee loan of £9250.00
- 2) A means-tested maintenance loan with a parental income threshold of £25,000.00

However, it is incredibly important to focus on the amount you will repay rather than the amount you will borrow. The amount you repay depends wholly on the amount you earn after graduation. The more you earn, the more you repay however chances are, you'll never repay your full loans but we'll get into that further on.

You don't need cash to pay for university

One of the biggest misconceptions from both prospective students and their parents is that these £9,250 fees are due in full before you start at university; this simply is not the case. No public university in the country operates on a policy of 'pay up or you cannot come. Provided you meet certain eligibility criteria ( go to www.gov.uk/student-finance for more information) Student Finance England will automatically make your tuition fee payments to your university. You will never have to worry about making a payment yourself.

(Unless you are assessed as a self-funding student when you will have to pay the fees yourself!)

It is your decision whether to apply for the full £9,250 or a lower amount however if you do apply for a lower amount, you will need to fund the remaining balance yourself. Tuition Fee Loans are not means tested so if you meet the aforementioned eligibility criteria, you will be eligible for the full amount.

I will never be able to afford the repayments!

PLEASE NOTE THE BELOW FIGURES ARE ESTIMATES AND SUBJECT TO CHANGE
THE FIGURES BELOW ONLY RELATE TO NEW STUDENTS STARTING COURSES FROM SEPTEMBER 2023

Repayments on Tuition Fee and maintenance Loans depend wholly on the amount you earn and if you earn under £25,000, you will never repay a penny. HMRC takes all repayments directly from your salary, meaning you will never need to worry about making or missing a payment. If you earn over £25,000 per year and your income changes to below £25,000 repayments will automatically stop.

As mentioned, the amount you repay will depend on the amount you earn however; the percentage you repay will stay the same. You will repay 9% of any amount over £25,000 See below for a few examples: FIGURES ARE APPROXIMATE

If I earn £28,000 a year, how much will I repay?

£28,000 is £3,000 above the threshold meaning you will repay 9% of £3,000. This equates to £264 a year or £22.00 a month.

If I earn £31,000 a year, how much will I repay?

£31,000 is £6,000 above the threshold meaning you will repay 9% of £6,000. This equates to £540.00 a year or £45 per month

I will be repaying this for the rest of my life!

Not true – after forty years any amount you currently owe is wiped out so if for 40 years you earn £25,000 a year, you will not have repaid a penny and your debt will be clear. The reality is that only high incomes will repay their loans in full. It is important to note that not repaying much because you are just over the threshold is not a bad thing. These loans are designed as more of a graduate tax rather than a loan.

No debt collectors with student loans

Another common myth with student loans is that you will have someone turning up at your door ordering you to make repayments – this may be the case with a lot of loans, but not these. As your repayments are made directly from your salary, there is never any possibility that this could happen. Even if you are not repaying anything because you are earning less than £25,000, you will never be asked to make a repayment. You will be able to see the amount you have repaid on your payslip each month, as well as your P60.

So how much interest will I pay?

You'll be charged interest on your loan from the day you receive your first payment or make payment to your university or college until it's been repaid in full or cancelled. SLC/SFE calculate the interest daily and apply it to your balance each month – this is known as 'compound interest'. The interest rate you'll be charged depends on which repayment plan you're on.

The interest rate is based on the Retail Price Index (RPI), which is a measure of inflation.

It measures changes to the cost of living in the UK.

You can find the most accurate and up-to-date information on interest rates at www.gov.uk/repaying-your-student-loan

Maintenance Loan

If you meet the eligibility criteria (more details available at www.gov.uk/student-finance), then you will be able to apply for a Maintenance Loan to help towards the cost of living whether this be your accommodation costs, food, rent, or travel. It will not cover everything so you need to budget accordingly.

Maintenance Loan -Continued

A Maintenance Loan is paid in three instalments across the academic year – you will receive a payment in September, January & April. These payments are paid directly to the student and it is up to you how you spend them however for many, this is the only income you will have so it is wise to pay any bills first and budget the rest. These loans are means-tested so the amount you receive will be dependent on your parent's household income however, everyone who meets the eligibility criteria for a Maintenance Loan is eligible for the minimum amount.

The amount you receive is dictated by two elements:

The guaranteed bit – Everyone, regardless of parental income is eligible to receive a minimum of approximately £3,698.00 per year, however, if your parents earn less than £70,000 combined then you might be eligible for more.

The income assessed bit – The amount you can borrow is means-tested meaning it depends on your parent's income (pre-tax & minus pensions). Below are a few examples. Please note the figures used may change.

Wembley Campus based students

If your parents earn £25,000, you will receive £8,400.00 per year living at home with your parents or £13,022.00 living away from the parental home in London.

Manchester Campus based students

If your parents earn £25,000, you will receive £8,400.00 per year living at home with your parents or £9,978.00 living away from the parental home.

If you want to find out exactly how much you will receive before you apply, then you can check out the following link - <https://www.gov.uk/student-finance-calculator>.

It is a few straightforward questions, including your parent's household income, then at the end it will give you two amounts – one will be your Tuition Fee Loan of £9,250, and the other will be the Maintenance Loan.

My maintenance Loan is too small

One question I am posed at every open day is that the amount offered on the Maintenance Loan is too small. It is not enough to cover rent or if it is it leaves you with barely anything to live on. Unfortunately, there are no alternatives available from Student Finance England. With no real signs of these amounts increasing, it is so important for you to budget appropriately. Part-time work and extra funds from parents could be an option for some.

You may also want to speak to our scholarship team at UCFB who may be able to help with a bursary or scholarship, which might help towards travel, accommodate, or tuition fee costs related to your course but you must apply early for these as they are limited and go very quickly. They can be contacted at scholarships@ucfb.com

Deadlines to apply for maintenance loans

To make sure these loans are in place for your first semester in September, students residing in England, need to apply before the final working day in May. If you live in Scotland, you have until June but for Welsh & Northern Irish students, the deadline is a lot earlier. Unfortunately, these deadlines are subject to change each year so we cannot offer an exact date.

However, hold on! Missing the deadline is not all bad news – what it means is that you may not get your full allowance in September. What you will get is a minimum of approximately £3,698.00 and then once all of your evidence has been reviewed, you will receive a top-up amount if you are eligible for any further support.

Will taking a loan affect my credit score?

One of the biggest myths around student loans is that because they are such high-value loans, they are bound to affect your credit score. In reality, however, this simply is not the case. When you borrow from a bank for a credit card, loan, or mortgage, to evaluate whether they will make money from you, lenders look at three pieces of information – your application form, any previous dealings they have had with you, and crucially, the information on your credit reference files. Most normal financial transactions and credit relationships you have are listed on these files, yet student loans are not included.

So will my student loan affect my ability to get a mortgage?

One big worry from students and parents is that high-value loans and subsequent debt means they will undoubtedly have a negative effect on their ability to get a mortgage in the future. Of course, having a student loan is worse than not having one when it comes to applying for a mortgage, though it will not mean you definitely cannot get one. Completing a degree usually leads to better opportunities for employment and the potential to earn higher meaning those who do not have student loans are earning less than you do. Essentially meaning you are on a level playing field.

Here is what the Council for Mortgage Lenders has said on the matter “A student loan is very unlikely to impact materially on an individual’s ability to get a mortgage, but the amount of mortgage may depend on net income”. What they are saying is that the fact you have a student loan will not affect your chances of getting a mortgage, however mortgage lenders will use your net salary rather than your gross salary to make any decisions

Can I repay my loan early?

Yes. In the early days of student loans, the Government consulted on penalties to stop people from repaying early and avoiding interest – thankfully the mass of feedback they received was against the idea and it was scrapped. This doesn’t mean that you should repay early though, in fact, it’s common knowledge that you shouldn’t repay more than you have to unless you’re in a position to do so. In general, we would encourage you to pay off your debts as quickly as possible however, student loans are different. This is because many will not fully repay the amount due before the debt is wiped out after 40 years. Even if you have enough cash to clear the loan in full, it may not be worth it as your repayments primarily depend on what you earn, not what you borrowed. It could mean you need to repay less than what you owed.

So how do I budget whilst at university?

Well, the simple answer is, you cannot. Yet. Without knowing your income, you will not be able to know what you have to spend. Your income is defined as your student loan plus any grants, bursaries, wages, and additional money from your parents. Add all this up and that is your total, now you know what you can spend. The only way you will know how much student loan you are going to get is by actually applying. You could always use the Student Finance Calculator mentioned earlier, however, this does not confirm that you will receive the money, only how much you may receive.

If you are working whilst at university, you should remember to take into account any tax and National Insurance you will be required to pay.

Student Finance has changed once: can it change again?

The short answer is yes. It is important to remember that the Government is Omni competent. In other words, it is completely free to make and change rules that have already been implemented. There is no 100% guarantee that the system will remain unchanged for the next 40 years until your debt is wiped out. That being said, it is incredibly unlikely that any negative changes made in the future will impact you. Policymakers in the UK are generally averse to retrospective change. When we examine the history of student loans, any changes brought in have only affected new students. While nothing is impossible, I would say with a certain degree of confidence, the system now, is the system that you will use for the entire life of the loans.
